But what you can do manually in a video editing software, is one thing that can be done automatically. You might try the Keymacro system, which allows you to record with any camera on a Mac, as well as use your own computer to create recordings. However, it is not a standalone software, but you need to use an external device such as a capture card or a USB camera to achieve this. You can have a preview of the changes. Keymacro cannot be used to automatically record video from any given source. Instead, you need to capture your content, store it in a format that Keymacro can read, and then process the file, including the recording of the changes. On the other hand, Keymacro allows you to record
