file:${jetty.home}/etc/jetty.io application/json Q: Is there a word for when a person sees themselves as a dead person? I'm attempting to see if there is a good word for when a person is of the opinion that they are dead (or no longer living). My particular term is from stories about an apartment building that is haunted. They say it so much, that one tenant begins to believe that he is dead and is just visiting. I'm looking for a single word, and not "depressed" A: This condition of being convinced by which you believe yourself dead, in the sense of being convinced that the events taking place in your life are in fact having no effect on you, that you are dead, that you no longer exist, as opposed to imagining that the state in which things are happening to you is not a fact, as opposed to having a positive opinion about it, is known as nihilism. The more important issue, however, is not what will be agreed in the negotiations. Rather it is what will not be agreed, even though it is something the UN Secretary General, António Guterres, has also stressed. For if the UNFCCC is to retain any credibility, it must deliver on what was agreed in Copenhagen and RIO — the world must ratify the Paris Climate agreement, and this should include the critical two items in the global climate regime for which there was no agreement in Paris — the emission targets and the monitoring of greenhouse gas emissions. And while the United States may wish to “walk away” from the Paris Agreement, it will be faced with the difficult choice of returning to Paris or walking away from U.N. agreements which require the United States to submit to legally binding rules which cannot be avoided.
