“This is the best, most authentic football game in our company’s history,” EA Sports COO Peter Moore said in a press release. “FIFA is at its best when it captures the essence of football and helps people fall in love with this beautiful game all over the world.” The open beta also will be available on Xbox One, PlayStation 4 and PC, at no cost. “At EA, we’re dedicated to bringing players the best FIFA experience, across all platforms and devices,” he said. “The new engine delivers faster, more precise and spectacular gameplay, from FIFA Ultimate Team to gameplay innovations for offline mode, all while optimizing the game for high frame rates and HDR. We really are changing the way people play football.” In September, EA Sports released FIFA 18, adding a new mode called “Create a Team,” which allowed players to build custom teams, then play them in Madden NFL 19. Last week, EA Sports announced that it would host the Xbox One, PlayStation 4 and PC trials of FIFA Ultimate Team. For the first time, players will be able to trade any player in FIFA Ultimate Team with the in-game currency. To play, connect your Xbox One, PlayStation 4 or PC to the internet and download FIFA Ultimate Team, or you can use any Steam account. The earliest version of the game will be available on Sept. 22 for $59.99.
