The program has an easy-to-use interface. You won't need to use any advanced features or features that you aren't familiar with to be able to use the program. 9. Adobe Photoshop Elements Has a Large 05a79cecf

Q: equivalence relation on algebraic closure implies equivalence relation on every algebraic closure Let  $k$  be a field and  $\overline{k}$  its algebraic closure. Is it true that any two elements  $x, y$  in  $\overline{k}$  are equivalent iff they are equivalent in  $\overline{k}$ ? (The motivation for this comes from a problem about a finite representation of a permutation group in the isomorphism problem for finite groups.) If  $k=\mathbb{C}$  I know a proof. For any commutative ring  $R$  and element  $r$  in  $R$  we define the map  $R \rightarrow R$  given by  $x \mapsto xr$ . Now assume that  $x, y$  are equivalent. If  $k$  is infinite then we can suppose that  $R$  is a polynomial ring and so the image of  $x, y$  in  $R$  is isomorphic to  $\mathbb{Z}_p$  for  $p$  a prime. So then we have  $x^p=y^p$  and  $(x/y)^p=1$ . But then  $\overline{k}$  is an algebraic closure of  $R$  and so  $x/y=1$  for some  $r$  in  $R$ . So  $y=rx$  and so  $x$  and  $y$  are equivalent. However, when  $k$  is algebraically closed I don't know how to proceed. Any ideas? A: Here is an example where  $x$  and  $y$  are not equivalent over  $k$ , but the image of  $x$  and  $y$  under the map  $k \rightarrow k$  is the same: Let  $X \subset \mathbb{A}^2(k)$  be the 1-dimensional algebraic surface with equations  $xy=0$  and  $x^2+y^2=1$ . Let  $x, y \in \overline{k}$  be such that  $x$  and  $y$  are not algebraically dependent over  $k$ . It follows from Lemma 2.4 (1) in Propositions 8.2.2 of that there exists a field  $l \subset \overline{k}$

Allegheny County Residents who rely on income from county property taxes for survival could end up missing a deadline to file taxes this year. But for many county residents who have always made money from the real estate market, they can file an extension and still get the check they need. The IRS deadline to file taxes for 2009 was Monday, but only those without an extension can use the deadline. In Allegheny County, only the four largest real estate agents — WCA, Cendant, Key Real Estate of Pittsburgh and Redstone Realty — are allowed to offer an extension on Pittsburgh homes and most of the real estate in the city. "We have already done the work of filing taxes for you," said Daniel Golden, director of tax services for the county. "But some customers find it just easier to file themselves, or hire a company like ours to do it for them." The four agents — and one in Beaver — offer a range of tax services, from filing to appraising to helping customers sell homes that are tax-delinquent. Some of these services are required by the IRS. But because the real estate business requires frequent interaction with home sellers, many agents are required to file taxes for their customers, the way traditional tax preparers do. If those home owners — or the people who buy their houses — don't file their taxes by Monday, they'll have to file them after the IRS deadline. The last day to file them in Pittsburgh is Aug. 30. The problem, say experts, is getting those taxpayers who don't have an extension to file taxes when they're supposed to. "The IRS gives out extensions based on your income, and some people in the low-income brackets don't qualify. "It is definitely an issue, and it's the kind of issue that will bite people who don't have a tax preparer," said Jeff Yudi, a tax adviser with the Key tax preparer. Yudi encourages a lot of people to go online to make their tax returns, but the IRS deadline is tough. A year ago, Yudi said, some clients of his who didn't qualify for an extension tried to meet the April 18 deadline by creating and filing their own tax return, like a paper tax return. When it came time to mail the papers to the IRS to prove their tax obligation, the IRS returned them, saying they had to be filed with the tax
